THE BROUGHAM BENEFIT.

Mr. JOHN BROUGHAM:—Dear sir—On the eve of your departure for California—there, we doubt not, to enjoy in large measure the hospitality of a large feed on the eve of your departure for California—there, we doubt not, to enjoy in large measure the hospitality of a large feed on the large measure the hospitality of a large feed on the large work that you will accept at their feed on the large work that you will accept at their hands a complimentary benefit. This tribute of esteem is tendered out of a sincere regard for your character, which, both as, man and artist, has endeared you to thousands of admirers, and also out of a desire to give practical expression to the high sense which is entertained in this community of the value of your professional labors. During more than twenty years of brilliant industry passed upon the American stage you have steadily and largely contributed, alike with tongue and pen, to the innocent pleasure and amusement of the public mind. Some of the brightest and most cherished memories of the aire-goers in New York are associated with your same.

atre-poers in New York are associated with your name: net a benefactor, indeed, whom all men remember with pleasure.

To respect such labors as yours, to honor such a career, and, in ever so slight a degree, to reciprocate obligations conserved by years of well directed intellectual toil, is no less a duty than a delight. It seems fit and proper that the occasion of your departure for a new field of exertion, for new triumphs and new friends, should be improved in a public and emphatic way to give expression to the esteem in which you are such as the proposed of the p

Will you, therefore, be kind enough to specify a day and evening in which performances may be given in accordance with the wish herein proposed?

BLINDFOLD IN A SACK.

The law ought to interfere! Speculation in human blood, Ac., &c. Squeamish people dread a burn, and yet the sturdy smith bears a thousand soars in the simple construction of a horsesboe. Somebody has failen. The law ought to interfere. Simple belief in two gentlemen, quite what a Byron would designate "nature's noblemen," who have passed earnest lives in solving difficult herculean physical problems, leads the Directors of The Tammany to piace implicit faith in THE RIZARELI BROTHERS.

What they say they will do they will do. They will not fail. They will not fail. They will not imperi their unduly for the consideration of a night's salary, great though it be. Consideration for the possibility of a young and handsome widow also would prevent them. They simply desire to evidence to the world what great study and practice, a high condition of the nerves and muscles, and steady purpose of the brain will pushes man to achieve a salety purpose of the brain will pushe man to achieve a single rope forty feet away.
